

Honorary Fellow | PCI

Conferred, never purchased.

A board-conferred recognition of distinguished contribution to project controls. No examination. No fee.
And no entitlement.

WHY THIS NEEDS SAYING

Most honorary titles are bought.

Not in those words. A nomination fee. An assessment fee. A credential fee. A ceremony ticket. And a review that has never once declined an applicant who paid.

The letters arrive.
The distinction does not.

WHAT IT COSTS TO APPLY

Nothing.

- No nomination fee
- No assessment fee
- No credential fee

Payment does not influence the decision, and buys
no entitlement to it.

WHO IT IS FOR

The bar, in three parts.

8

YEARS

Project controls,
cost, finance or project management

3

MANAGERIAL

Leading teams,
functions,
programmes or budgets

Merit

A RECORD

Sustained contribution to the profession

All three. Not any one of them.

WHAT MEETING THE BAR GETS YOU

Nothing, automatically.

Conferral is at the board's sole discretion. We may ask for more information. We may decline without stating reasons.

A distinction granted to everyone who qualifies to be considered is not a distinction. It is a mailing list.

THE LINE WE WILL NOT BLUR

It is not a certification.

- ✗ An examined PCI credential
- ✗ Accreditation or a licence
- ✗ Evidence of competence

PCL-AI, PFL-AI and PML-AI are earned by examination, on every route. Nobody is given one for a distinguished career—including people who have one.

HOW IT WORKS

Four steps.

1 Apply

A résumé, your experience and a summary in your own words. A reference is issued.

2 Board review

Fifteen to thirty days — an estimate, not a commitment.

3 If shortlisted

One government ID and a photograph, by secure link. Deleted after the decision.

4 Conferral

An award number, publicly verifiable on the register.
